About Hagstrom:

Hagstrom guitars are highly revered for their quality, design, and most notably their fast playing necks. Such was the popularity of the instruments in their heyday that Hagstrom estimated 800,000 musicians had played their guitars including Elvis Presley, Frank Zappa, and the Beatles.

Hagstrom Guitars was founded by Albin Hagstrom of Alvdalen, Sweden. Albin Hagstrom began by importing German accordions in 1921 and a year later, Italian accordions which would establish the early Hagstrom affinity for celluloid coverings. Following the war music crazes had an enormous impact on the eventual success of the Hagstrom guitar as accordion sales eventually evaporated. When Albin Hagstrom passed away in 1952, Director Erik Wisen would see salvation in six strings and rock and roll. Following Wisen's death in '67, Albin's son Karl-Erik Hagstrom's observation of the American market would greatly influence the evolution of the Hagstrom line.
